Some areas just seem to have it all and the Camargue region is among those fortunate ones. Just far enough south to shake off the last edges of the temperate climate, the Camargue and surrounding areas already display some of the best that Mediterranean nature has to offer.

This guidebook describes the nature life of three totally different areas that are each others direct neighbours: Camargue, La Crau and Les Alpilles. The Camargue is a huge complex of meadows, reedbeds, dunes and salt marshes that filled with birds. Visitors are treated to grand views over large lagoons with flamingos and waterfowl. The famous Camargue horse roams the open plains.

The shimmering steppes of La Crau are inhabited by a Sahara-like birdlife. Les Alpilles have yet another appeal. The forested hills and white limestone cliffs are dotted with orchids and inhabited by beautiful butterflies. Combine the three areas and you have a region of an incredible diversity. All you have to do is step outside and witness it.
